

SHOULD I Talk to the Pastor?

If this question ever crosses your mind, there is reason to do what it asks. Too many times we hesitate to “bother” or “annoy” the pastor with our concerns, convinced that he has greater things to do. This isn’t the case!

Are you ever lonely or depressed? Yes, everybody is at times. Some psychologists believe that people are more afraid of being lonely than of being hungry. The pastor can be trusted with your real feelings, even though they might even be shameful. Instead of trying to fight it through alone, why not talk and pray with the pastor about it?

The pastor can help you understand problems and suggest ways of dealing with them. He also knows where to refer you if further assistance is needed. So “should I talk to the pastor?” Yes, anytime you need to? I am there for you through the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ, who died for you and me!
